as the more highly favored sections of this state.

"Utah is the Pennsylvania of the west, and in time she will take the same relative place among the commonwealths of the Pacific coast as the Keystone state now occupies on the Atlantic shore Her mineral wealth is incalculable, and as yet has been mereby prospected. Time and capital will breat that.

"California is more particularly interested in the coal fields of the territory. An abundant and cheap supply of coal would, I believe, do more for the development of the resources of the state than any other agency. We are prepared to meet that demand. The deposits of Utah comprise vast fields of bituminous coking coal, with some anthracite, and when our line is in operation we will be in a position to place it in California in unlimited quantities and at prices that will enable our manufacturers to compete in the markets of the world with those of the east.

To the Editor of The Herald:

which is hearthy and sincerely ecord him.

Will Mr. Warner explain, if he can, wherein he finds malice against him in a single statement I have made? He cannot do it. Why should I make a "malicious" statement against Mr. Warner, a gentleman il do not know and as I am informed and believe to be a respectable mercler of the bar?

I believe I have a right, even as a member of the bar, to express my honest and candid opinion upon a matter of so great an importance to the public, though it might be necessary for me in so doing to step on Mr. Warner's corn; but in this instance that does does seem to be necessary. Will Mr. Warner be kind enough to tell us upon wast principle of legal ethics this is improfessional? The whole trouble with Mr. Warner seems to be that he jumped at a wrong conclusion in conceiving the idea that I sought in any way to reflect upon him, or he wanted a little "notoriety" in the matter—just what he accused me og. I hope that Mr. Warner, she myself, has gone beyond that period in professional life, as I would have mercy shown bayis. So would I do justice to Mr. Warner, and will say that I have not the remotest doubt but what Mr. Warner did all he could, and performed his duty conscientiansty in his able defense of Davis. No one has ever before charged me of ever having said or done anything upon a subject in which the public were interessed, for a bad or improper motive. And I dane say if Mr. Warner interessed, for a bad or improper motive. And I dane say if Mr. Warner interessed, for a bad or improper motive. Now then, all that has been said by Mr. Warner does not in the least change the principle or motives of my humble prayer for mercy to his client, because it is made upon a higher motive than Mr. Warner would have us believe. Simply a desire to see what manifestly appears to be an error, corrected, an error that Mr. Warner is in no wise responsible for.

Mr. Warner says he had advised, and that Davis did testify to "facts which, standing alone and indisputable by other evidence, would have warranted a jury in returning a verdict of voluntary manslaughter," but that the
